Frequently Asked Questions

Does one insurance policy provide coverage for General Liability and Property losses?

No. These are two separate policies that can be combined to provide the desired coverage. Contact P. Morin Courtier for details.

What is meant by the Retailer/Resort Instructional Policy option?

Retailers and resorts that purchase the General Liability policy can choose to purchase professional liability insurance for staff members at a reduced rate. The policy limit under this option is $1,000,000 ($2,000,000 annual aggregate) per incident, for the store/resort and all professional staff members, regardless of the number of instructors/divemasters insured and/or involved in a claim. The coverage for the store and individuals is subject to all Exclusions and Conditions of the professional liability policy.

Does the General Liability policy cover “Tec Rec” services provided by the dive store/resort?

Yes. Coverage includes: equipment sales, rentals, repair and gas fills.

Does my store policy cover me if I’m sued by a staff member for wrongful termination, hostile work environment or other similar employment practices claims?

No. In order to have coverage for these types of claims, you must secure an “Employment Practices Liability (EPL) policy designed specifically to cover these types of claims. P. Morin Courtier does have an optional EPL policy available for PADI Members in Quebec. Contact P. Morin Courtier for details and an application.

What is “co-insurance” mentioned on the Property policy?

“Co-insurance” refers to an often-overlooked requirement of store contents insurance coverage. A co-insurance requirement means that the insurance company stipulates that the retailer insures a given percentage of his store inventory value (usually 80%). If the retailer insures for less than the co-insurance requirement, then reimbursement for a loss will be decreased, even if the loss is less than the value insured. For example, suppose your inventory is $100,000 and your policy has an 80% co-insurance requirement. In this case, you must insure at least $80,000 of your inventory. If you insured only $50,000, for example, you would be paid only five-eighths ($50,000 divided by $80,000) of any claim in the event of a loss. For a $10,000 loss, you would only be reimbursed $6250, even though you insured $50,000 of your inventory.

When an insurance company includes a co-insurance clause, it can reduce what it pays for a loss. Unfortunately, many retailers overlook co-insurance clauses, which are typically “hidden” in the fine print, and may not be understood until it’s too late. (The PADI-endorsed policy does not have a co-insurance clause.)

How does the Business Income coverage, which is part of the Property policy, work?

A Business Income loss is lost net income resulting from a direct loss from a covered peril, such as a fire or windstorm. A Business Income loss is not covered unless it is directly caused by covered damages to the insured property.

For example,* if the building suffers a fire (covered peril) and the business is unable to open for a period of time, the Business Income coverage will respond. However, if the building damage is due to earthquake (or flood/wave action), which is not a covered peril under this policy, the Business Income coverage will not respond. Also, Business Income losses must be proven by your financial records in order to verify your loss.

What is “Business Income From Dependant Property” coverage, which is part of the Property policy?

If income is received from property you do not occupy, such as a hotel/resort, and that property is damaged by a peril covered in your policy, you are covered up to $5,000 for loss of Business Income from that “dependant” property.

If I sell my store, can I transfer my policy to the new owner?

No, the new owner must obtain a new policy.

\ Subject to policy terms and conditions.*

This brochure is for illustration purposes only and is designed as a general description of the policies. Coverage will be determined by the actual policy language.
